THE RULING PASSION.

- The locks that curl around your brow
  I do so much admire;
  To twins them round my finger tips
  Is all I could desire.
  I love you well, my darling Charles.
  So kindly and so fair.
  And I think what won my wayward heart
  Is your brocks admire hear.
- Is your lovely anburn hair. We have been wed a long, long time-
- We have been wed a long, long time—
  This is the winetcenth year—
  And I love you if your head now is
  A burnished, shining aphere.
  Your loss of init I storit deplore:
  My joy thereal is great,
  For when I've cleaned the house all o'er
  I can scrob your dear old pate—

CIVIL-SERVICE REFORM. What an Aged Statesman Thinks-Views

of Horatio Seymour. If there is any one man now living in this country who is capable, from long intercourse with them, of forming a correct judgment in regard to the class whom the "holier than thou" people of the present day contemptuously term "mere politicians," that man is Horatia Seymour. As all know, we do not now, and never expect to, agree with Mr. Seymour on political topics, but we have always regarded him as one of the ablest men of the country, whose fifty years' experience in political life gave great weight to his opinions. By the following extract it will be seen that Mr. Seymour does not agree with the new school of political philosophers, who teach that ignorance of political life is the very best recommendation for official position: that the less a man knows in re-gard to political questions and in regard to the mon who discuss political questions, and the less he tries to enforce his honest political opinions upon his fellow-citizens, the more worthy is he of political preferment and exalted public position. In speaking of this and kindred ideas Mr. Sey-

In speaking of this and kindred ideas Mr. Seymour said:

I never loved the exercise of power, never cared particularly for public places, but I always liked politics, and, what is more, I like politicians. They are a much-abused class. It is the fashion to sneer at them, but I think they are better men as a rule than merchants and bankers and other rorresentatives of what is called respectability. They make more sacrifices and do more unselfish work for others than business men ever think of doing. They cultivate a certain chivalric sense of honor. Even some who are naturally corrupt will refuse the most tempting bribes when the integrity of their party is involved. I have seen enough of political life to satisfy me that its influence is elevating, and not degrading. I would much rather be tried by a jury of my political opponents who were acknowledged politicians than by a jury of respectable business men who said that they took no particular interest in politics, but usually voted the Bepublican ticket. From them I should expect gross injustice and prejudice ten times as intense as my avowed political opponents would display. The man who serves a cause, if it is not a positively bad cause, is ennobled by the service. Hole learns to look at men, as well as doctrines, from a higher standpoint than mere personal selfishness. Hence I repeat that I like politicians, as well as politics, but I do not like office.

Mr. Seymour is now out of political life, but the

Mr. Seymour is now out of political life, but the long-haired cults and destringires who are con-stantly haranguing about "professional politicians," and decrying them, their methods, and their aspirations, would do well to-read and ponder the above before opening their sanctified iths for another harangue,

FATHER GAVAZZI.

His Last Attack on the Catholic Church in New York.

Father Gavazzi, the Italian preacher, spoke last Sunday night for the last time before leaving for Italy at the Masonic Temple, at Twenty-third cet and Sixth avenue, to the Independent Cathclie Church. The Free Italian Church, he said began its work after Italy was united and the papal power broken. At that time there were no places in Italy, except Roman Catholic churches, where men could worship; meetings were held in secret and without the walls of Rome. Now there was a free church in all the principal towns of Haly—seventy-one in all, with over three thousand communicants. There was not a communicant or a priest who was not formerly a Roman Cathoor a priest who was not formerly a Roman Catholic. In the evangelical schools were 1,500 pupils, and two-thirds of them were children of Roman Catholics. A theological college had been established in Rome. The church was not sectarian or denominational, for it was not the result of any foreign Protestant influence, but it sprang from the heart of the Italian people. The fact that all its preachers were Italians gave it much more influence than it would otherwise have had. The Free Italian Christians did not wish to be called Reformers, for they were did not wish to be called Reformers, for they were not trying to reform the Church of Rome. That was unreformable. They were going back to the Church of the Primitive Christians of Rome. Owing largely to the efforts of this church there was as much freedom of conscience in Italy and there were as many advantages in the way of free there were as many advantages in the way of free schools as in the United States. The contrast be ween Italy and America was striking. In Italy the more intelligent Roman Catholics sent their children to the Free Church Schools, while many They said the education of nuns and Jesuits was better than that of American schools. Did the Pope send priests and Jesuits to America to be educated? No; it was to make up in America for what he had lost in Italy, and to make more priests and nuns.—New Fork Tribune.

AN IMPORTANT WITNESS.

He Saw the Shooting of the President-What He Says About 1t.

Hon. A. E. Wagner, of Ithaca, N. Y., was in the city yesterday. He came here at the request of Colonel Corkhill, the latter having learned that Judge Wagner was present when Guiteau attempted to assessinate the President Learning that the presidential party would leave the city, and that the President and his party would take the train that morning for Long Branch, and never having seen the President, Judge Wagner, in company with a friend, re-paired to the Sixth street depot for the purpose of taking a look at the Chief Magistrate of his coun-try. He and his friend took their stand in the second room, and Judge W says be was looking intently at the President when the first shot was fired. Not comprehending what the re-port meant, supposing a torpedo had accidentally exploded, he kept his gaze riveted on the Prest exploded, he kept his gaze riveled on the President. No twitching or movement took place on the part of the President at the first shot, and therefore Judge Wagner thinks that it was the first shot that grazed the President's arm. Immediately there was a second report, when the President started and then sank upon the floor of the depot. As Judge W. expressed it, the President seemed to sink right down, as If all support had suddenly been with-drawn from under him. Being asked what Secretary Blaine did upon the shooting, Judge Wagner stated that Mr. Blaine first started toward Guiteau, as if to arrest him, but, seemingly on second thought, he turned his attention to the President then lying prone on the floor and vomiting. Judge Wagner will, of course, be a prominent witness at the trial of the assassin, and expects to be subpoensed to return here in September to give his

Riding Two Political Horses. The following, taken from the Critic of yesterday evening, does Mr. Fernald great injustice. He has consistently favored condition from the beginning as the only policy for the Republicans in Virginia to pursue at this time, and we feel sure that he will correct over his own name the misstatements of the Oritic promptly: the misstatements of the Critic promptly:

There is one sistinguished Republican in Virginia who is evidently trying to ride two horsespolitical horses we mean—at the same time. The Ron. W. L. Fernald, collector of internal revenue for the Danville (Va.) district, has always been regarded by his Republican friends as a vacillating and wavering brother. The Richmond Whag, the organ of the Readjusters, preclaimed with loud trumpeds that Mr. Fernald was unqualifiedly in favor of the coalition movement in Virginia. The Whig, in a long editorial, congratuates the Readjusters that a man possessed of so much influence in the Republican party had embraced the good cause of Readjusterism. Several weeks have passed since this announcement was made, and the Hon. Fernald has never denied the story. Now the honorable gentleman comes to the front and writes a letter to a Republican friend in the Old Dominion, in which he denies the report that he had expressed himself to any one in favor of coalition, and did not intend to do so until after the action of the Republican convention. This has made the Readjusters awful mad, and some of them swear that even should the Republican Convention decide to coalesce with them, they will never consent to take Mr. Fernald in full fellowship into the party.

His One Hundredth Birthday.

Mr. Michael Callan, of Georgetown, an atteresting sketch of whose lite was published in THE REPUBLICAN last Saturday, yesterday reached his one hundredth birthday. He held quite a re-ception, and a large number of people called to pay their respects to the hale and hearty centensrian. He was surrounded by his four daughters, one of whom came from New York to participate in the celebration of her father's one hundredth anniversary. His three sons, who live in Texas, all sent kindly messages. Mr. Callan looks as if he might have many years still to live.
